Dolores Fresquez: Relating “Into the Beautiful North” and other important works of fiction to language, culture, and myself.

Dolores Fresquez is a well-loved language, literature and business teacher, having taught 40 years in Roswell at the AP level. With a long New Mexican heritage, this native Santa Fean earned her bachelors from New Mexico Highlands and a masters in education from the University of New Mexico. She was married for 55 years to Amarante Fresquez, the first Hispanic superintendent of the Roswell Schools, who passed away last year. The Fresquez’s raised four sons who also became administrators within their own places of employment.

The presentation will take around 30 minutes with a Q & A following.
